STRING FURNITURE AND TAF STUDIO PRESENT MUSEUM SIDETABLE

This September, String Furniture will be launching the new table Museum Sidetable in collaboration with the design duo TAF Studio. The table, which is a further development of the wall shelf Museum NM&.045, is a height-adjustable pedestal table that elegantly showcases any item that is placed on it.

Ahead of the reopening of the fully renovated Nationalmuseum in Stockholm in 2019, TAF Studio was tasked with creating part of the interior design. The wall shelf Museum NM&.045 was designed for String Furniture in connection with this. The beautifully sleek yet strong shelf now holds sculptures, busts and other smaller objects from the museum's collections. However, the shelf works just as well in any modern home.

With the Museum family now being expanded to include the height-adjustable Museum Sidetable, the possibilities are even greater. The table can be used as a pedestal, living room side table, bedside table, computer desk, and much more. With the Museum Sidetable, you can always keep your favourite items within easy reach.

"The Museum Sidetable is a further development of the Museum NM&.045 wall shelf, which now has a stand-alone sibling. The new table is height-adjustable, making it flexible, multifunctional, and easy to position. Like the wall shelf, the Museum Sidetable is based on the idea that the table's primary task is to showcase and highlight whatever is placed on it, rather than to take centre stage itself," says Pär Josefsson, founder and part-owner of String Furniture.

The idea of the Museum Sidetable was born earlier in 2020, when TAF Studio launched the Famna sofa as part of an exhibition at Svenskt Tenn, where a suitable table was needed to display Josef Frank's artistic vases. As the table's legs, which are inspired by industrial steel beams, are not centred, the foot of the table can be slid under a bed or sofa, so that the square table top is always positioned within easy reach.

The Museum Sidetable is available for delivery as of September 2020.
